

Histoire Épistémologie Langage.

Information note for authors

HEL publishes thematic issues and open issues. Each issue is about 400 000 signs in length. The journal is published on paper and electronically but the electronic version is freely available on the internet only after a delay of 3 years (moving wall principle). Projects for thematic issues are read by at least one member of the Reading Committee specialized in the intended topic and are selected by the Editorial Board on the basis of his or her report. Such projects, when submitted, must include a synthetic description of their general orientation, a list of the papers considered and a short synopsis of each paper (with an indication of each author's name and of the intended length of his or her paper). The papers submitted for an open issue are selected on the basis of two independent reports (doubly anonymously) by members of the Reading Committee.

The Editorial Board may occasionally accept to publish editions of reasonably short Ms source material or translations of documents written in languages not usually known to the journal's readers. The languages of the journal are French and English, but no issue can be entirely in English. Articles written in the other european languages are also accepted. Unpublished manuscripts will not be returned.

Articles, or thematic projects, should be submitted both in printed and electronic form:

Papers should be accompanied by two 120 words abstracts, one in English and one in French and by a list of keywords. We recommend that the iconography should be furnished on numeric support (EPS format, 600 dpi minimum, Photoshop or Illustrator). The illustrations are not included in the text and are delivered independently in separate files. Citations (references) must be given by mentioning the name of the author, the publication date and the page (e.g. Stéfani 1976, p. 26 or Stéfani 1976, p. 26-30). Proper names appear in lower case throughout (in the text and in the citations as well as in the reference section). The reference section (bibliography) must be consistent with the following examples :
